PREFACE

A military complex is located 3 nm NNW of Chuang-Ho-Chieh (39 41N-122 58E). The probable headquarters area, infantry units, and artillery regiment are located at 39 44 44N-122 56 43E and carried in the Bombing Encyclopedia as Sha-Li-Tu Infantry Division Headquarters and Army Barracks Area A -

25X1 [redacted] (See Figure 2). The probable tank/assault gun regiment is located one nm northeast of the main barracks area at 39 46 00N-122 57 10E and is carried in the Bombing Encyclopedia as Sha-Li-Tu Army Barracks and Storage North Area B - [redacted] (See Figure 2 and 3). The purpose of this report is to describe the facilities occupied and used by the probable tank/assault gun regiment. No functional breakdown or description of the other facilities is included. However, a listing of the vehicles and equipment observed on selected photography at Sha-Li-Tu Infantry Division Headquarters and Army Barracks Area A is also included

III. Barracks area

14 Barracks (single story)

- 1 Probable administration building (single story)
- 2 Support buildings

IV. Probable explosives storage area

4 Probable explosives storage buildings

V. Tracked-vehicle driver training area

2 Driver-training obstacles are located on the course

VI. Tank/assault gun subcaliber firing range

1 Probable range maintenance building

SECURITY

The tank/assault gun storage and maintenance facility is secured by a wall. The general storage area within the facility is separately secured by a probable fence. The administration and barracks area and the other barracks area are secured by fences. No security measures are observed at the probable explosives storage area or at the range area.

VEHICLES/EQUIPMENT

The only vehicles or pieces of equipment observed on [redacted] photography are 6 tanks/assault guns (4 of which are canvas covered) at the firing range. Six unidentified objects are located immediately in front of the tanks/assault guns. Photography of [redacted] revealed 2 probable tanks/assault guns at the subcaliber firing range.

LEVEL OF ACTIVITY AND CHANGES IN THE INSTALLATION

The driver training area and the subcaliber firing range appear moderately active on all coverage. Scarring in the vehicle storage and maintenance facility indicates that the facility has been undergoing a moderate degree of usage. The barracks areas appear well maintained and occupied. No change to any of the facilities is observed from [redacted]
